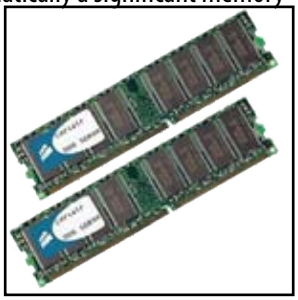
Upgrading Your Memory to Improve Performance

As programs get more complex, you'll discover that your trusty PC may not be working as quickly or efficiently as it used to. While your impulse might be to purchase a new, more powerful computer, you can dramatically improve performance simply by upgrading your memory. For far less than what you'd pay for a new computer, a memory upgrade will often have your PC working faster and more efficiently than ever before.

Beefing up your PC's memory is an inexpensive and surprisingly simple way to give yourself a huge boost in performance. Besides, today's complex software and graphics-intensive games chew up your memory almost as fast as you can add it on. Therefore, it's best to prepare for the immediate future by loading on as much memory as you can. To give you an example how things are changing in the memory game, Microsoft advises that you need at least 128MB of memory to run Windows XP, but the more the merrier, with 512MB ideal and 1GB even better. Many industry experts today recommend that you upgrade to at least 1 gigabyte (1GB) so you can be ready for the challenges ahead of you. With a gigabyte of memory your PC will be able to run multiple programs simultaneously and give you excellent speed.

Five Minutes and a Small Investment Make a Huge Difference in Performance

Two of the great things about upgrading your PC memory are the fact that it's cheap (especially when you consider dramatically a significant memory upgrade will improve your performance), and it only takes about five minutes to drop in another memory card. And when you're done you will be able to keep more programs running, ramp up your speed on memory-eating graphics programs and play games like never before. Plus, your PC will handle like a precision machine.



Whether you're looking for DDR, DDR2, Dual Channel, Overclocking, SDRAM, SODIMM, RDRAMM, SIMM or ECC memory we have it all. Our huge inventory includes products from the world's best memory manufacturers including Acer, ATP, Axiom, Belkin, Cisco, Corsair, Delkin, Edge, HP, Kingston, Lexar, Micron, Nortel, PNY, Sandisk, Simpletech, SmartModular, Transcend, Viking and Zebra.

Why You Need Optimized WAN Performance

Reason # 23

Say hello to Steve. He's an employee in one of your remote offices hundreds of miles away. Don't be deceived – Steve is normally a very hard worker. But guess what happens when Steve tries to download that big Sales presentation from a file server in headquarters? - NOTHING.

That's because Steve often waits 15 minutes or more for large files to arrive at his desktop. Let's face it, application delivery across your WAN probably isn't what it should be, is it?

Ahh, but there's good news! Now you can accelerate your WAN performance up to 100X with MACH5 acceleration technology from Blue Coat Systems. True! MACH5 is built into all Blue Coat appliances to deliver five powerful application acceleration capabilities:

- Bandwidth management
- Protocol optimization
- Object caching
- Byte caching
- Compression

This unique combination of integrated features – available only from Blue Coat – work together to improve performance of file services, e-mail, video, SSL, and virtually all critical applications that Steve and all your remote users depend on.

With unmatched policy control and security capabilities, in addition to MACH5 acceleration technology, it's no surprise why IDC ranks Blue Coat #1 worldwide in Secure Content and Application Delivery.

So come on, let's get all your Steve's back to work!
